THE EDITOR'S NIGHTMARE.

BY "THE EVENING WORLD'S " POUT.

An editor sat in his chair one night,

A strange foreboding of evil bore.

Again came that quavering, ghostly knock

Clearer and bolder, as if to mock

The shivering soul in its deep despair.

Prolonging its terror with torture rare.

HUSBAND AND WIFE. One feels awfully guilty criticising a performance that will be imperfect until frequent repetition has remedied many of its defects. And yet this unpleasant duty must e fulfilled, for New York theatre-goers, like 733, 735, 737, 739, 741, 743 8th Ave., everybody else in this energetic metropolis, re always in a hurry to know everythingeven the worst. It may, therefore, be said that there is mild hope for "Husband and Wife," a farcical comedy, by F. C. Phillip and Percy Fendall, that was produced for the first time in this country Saturday night at the Garden Theatre. The hope did not loon very conspicuously through the performance but it was there. That is what I kept telling myself, and what I shall continue to tell my self for a couple of weeks or so. The farce, which was a distinct improve ment upon the average London fuu-maker, went very slowly. The scenes dragged pain fully-and when scenes in a farce drag, the outlook is not encouraging. They should go with a dash, capering through the probabilities, and vaulting over logical scruples with a lightness that can be acquired only by pracice. "Husband and Wife" is far more probable in every way than "Incog," yet it is not the people in it are so leaden and doughy-ate husbands morals. You may think from this that "Husband and Wife" is risque, but it is not. It will not bring a single blush of shame to the powdered cheek of modesty.

The Tiger Lilies's Club is responsible for an opposition organization in which the husbands who do not wish to have their morals ameliorated take part. The two clubs are looked upon with suspicion, and finally all the men and women are arrested and rattled off to a police court, from which they are ultimately dismissed. This scene, as interpreted saturday night, was very long drawn out and decidedly reminiscent. It suggested ate husbands morais. You may think from Aunt Jack." and also "Husbands Wives," that very admirable farce done in Harlem by Manager Hammerstein, and for some unaccountable reason, consigned to undeserving oblivion.

There is no reason, however, why the new farce should not enjoy a brief prosperity when it is in better shape. Some of the dialogue is bright, many of the situations are runny and one or two of the characters are For Bullalo, Magara Falls and the West funny and one or two or the characters are amusing.

Miss Cora Tanner, the star, is a comely young woman, totally unsuited to farce. It must be confessed that taking into consideration the fact that she is unaccustomed to such roles she did very well indeed. Her song might have been more hilarious. She rendered it as though she were singing in an oratorio. Miss Tanner's dresses, however, will appeal to theatre-going femininity. Dramatic art pails when it is a question of dresses. Miss Tanner will startle the natives. She even appears in a London police courting a gown that might be considered loud for the Park in the height of the season. This, the Park in the height of the season. This, however, by the way. Lionel Bland, Harry Brown, Mrs. 11dridge and Miss Kenward made the hits of the piece. Mr. Bland was admirable as the Judge and Mr. Brown highly entertaining as a snubbed husband let loose. As for " Aunt " Louisawell, she could give coints to everybody in the company. She really acted the role of Mrs. Montrevor Smith and was perpetually laughable. The part stood conspicuously out from its surroundings. Miss Kenward was also
